

Forthcoming "Turin Shroud" awareness media announcements

We wanted to share some exciting news with you all!

Our former editor David Rolfe has employed a PR Agency to help raise awareness and generate public debate around the Turin Shroud.

Whilst we know that some of our members may not use social media, we wanted to keep you all in the picture and will continue to do so! If you do use social media, we thought you might be interested in getting involved and support this important message to the world.

The campaign runs on two levels; The first to raise public awareness of the flawed C14 test which announced the Turin Shroud to be a fake back in 1988. As you are no doubt aware a recent Freedom of Information request has confirmed that the carbon dating examination was flawed and ignored a significant amount of independent scientific evidence. David has appeared on TV, on several Podcasts and in articles in The Times and The Guardian. He is keen to widen the reach and share this information with the general public as of course many people are not actually aware of the Turin Shroud. But most importantly it presents a wonderful opportunity to encourage the mainstream media to make the resurrection of Jesus a talking point in the run up to Easter.

The social media part of this campaign is running on Facebook, Instagram, TikTok and Twitter (please see links below) and all we would like you to do is follow them and share the content with your friends and networks. There will also be a number of exciting things happening over the next few months which we will keep you all updated on.
